

Mary Ann Kennedy won the Gaelic Singer of the Year award sponsored by the Highland Society of London at the 2019 Scots Trad Music Awards, which was broadcast live from the Aberdeen Music Hall on Saturday 7th December.

Mary Ann Kennedy (pictured below), who previously sang at the Society's November Dinner at the Savile Club in 2017, was awarded the prize by Eilidh Cormack, the winner from 2018.

The other nominees for the award were Kim Carnie (who co-hosted the live event with Mary Ann Kennedy), Ceitlin Lilidh (who performed on the night with Eilidh Cormack and Ellen MacDonald in the Gaelic super-group SIAN) and Brian O'hEadra; the winner was decided by public on-line vote.

Other live performances at the event included Skerryvore, Benedict Morris, Kris Drever, Heisk and Session A9.

